

Juror: Marina Shterenberg

"Integrating painting, traditional craft and digital media, my work is about the invisible boundaries and relationships between culture, architecture and individuals' perception. Two experiences have shaped my work greatly - immigration and motherhood. I am interested in ways in which we move through public spaces, create domestic rituals, construct personal space, and establish intimate connections influenced by history and culture. The resulting work is a kind of 'fractal geometry of human experience'. I am currently interested in how strangeness is born out of belonging in domesticity and nationalism. The concepts of the threshold, marriage, hospitality, and attachment to cultural identity are considered in my work, which include paintings, installations and interactive performance. I am developing new works as a series of physical encounters/ sessions/ mini-rituals. Together, the works form a collection of public intimate memories.
